Advanced Theory Seminar:
Michel Foucault
(G93.3112)

Prof. David Garland
Spring 2010
Conference Room, Sociology
Thursdays 4.00-6.00 pm
Puck Building, 4th Floor

Course description
This seminar will critically examine Foucault’s substantive historical studies and the concepts that he develops there, focusing upon those analyses that have the greatest significance for sociological research. We will discuss Madness and Civilization, The Birth of the Clinic, The Archaeology of Knowledge, The Order of Things, Discipline and Punish, The History of Sexuality vol 1, and his later essays on “Governmentality” and “Technologies of the Self”.

Discussion will focus upon Foucault's analyses of power; his account of the human sciences and their role in social institutions; dividing practices and forms of objectification; technologies of the self and subjectification; and finally the idea of rationalities of rule and “governmentality.” We will also explore the methodological approaches that Foucault described as “archaeology”, “genealogy” and “history of the present”. Although we focus on Foucault’s own major texts, we will also examine some work by other authors who use a Foucauldian style of analysis or else are critical of it.

The aim of the course is to enable students to understand this complex and influential body of work, to explore its relationship to other sociological and historical scholarship, and to appreciate how Foucauldian concepts and methods might be used in their own research.

Course requirements
Prior experience: Students must previously have taken a graduate class in social theory

Preparation and participation: Students taking this seminar will be required to do a considerable amount of intensive reading each week; to take an active part in classroom discussions; and to prepare short expository memos during the term.

Reading
Each week, all students will be required to do the “essential reading” as described below. In addition, two individual students will be given responsibility for writing a brief memo (no more than 3 pages, single spaced) summarizing the argument of that week’s reading. These memos are to be submitted to the instructor by midnight the day before the class. For each of our sessions, I will suggest one or two secondary works that provide a useful exposition or critique of the Foucauldian works we are reading. Students are encouraged
(but not required) to read these. Finally, at the end of the syllabus, I provide a long list of further readings that should be useful for preparing term papers or for doing further research.

Assessment
The quality and extent of students’ participation in class, together with the individual student memos, will count for 25% of the final grade. Each student will be required to do a term paper (maximum of 20 typed, double spaced pages) on a subject to be agreed with the instructor. These papers will count for the remaining 75% of the grade.

Topics for papers are to be developed by individual students in consultation with the instructor. Students are expected to have settled on an approved topic and to have presented a two page outline for approval, by the end of April at the latest. Earlier is better. Term papers are due on the last day of the exam period.

Required Books
The books listed below will form the basis of the reading for the course. They have been ordered at the NYU bookstore and ought to be purchased. They will not be made available as photocopies.

- Foucault, Madness and Civilization
- Foucault, The Birth of the Clinic
- Foucault, Discipline and Punish
- Foucault, The Order of Things
- Foucault, The Archaeology of Knowledge
- Foucault, The History of Sexuality: An Introduction
- Burchell (ed), The Foucault Effect
- Hubert Dreyfus and Paul Rabinow, Michel Foucault: Beyond Structuralism and Hermeneutics

Recommended secondary works:
These are useful introductions to Foucault’s work.
- Gary Gutting, Michel Foucault: A Very Short Introduction
- Eric Paras, Foucault 2.0
- Foucault, Power/Knowledge: Selected Interviews etc 1972-77 (edited by Colin Gordon)
- James Miller, The Passion of Michel Foucault

Copies of all essential and individually assigned readings not contained in these books will be made available on the class Blackboard site. If you have any difficulty accessing or downloading these, please contact my assistant Janelle Pitterson at pitterson@exchange.law.nyu.edu
The “Further readings” noted at the end of the syllabus are provided for students wishing to learn more about the specific topic. These lists include many expositional works that should help students grasp Foucault’s arguments. They should also be useful in preparation for term papers.
